My worst trip ever

Flying from London to Vienna

My worst trip ever was from London to Vienna two years ago. I got up very early in the morning because the flight was at eight o'clock in the morning on Sunday. The first underground train was at seven, so we had to take a taxi. We set off for the airport at six o'clock. My family and I arrived at the airport on time, and a woman at the check-in told us that our flight was cancelled because of technical problems. "Oh, no," I shouted.

There were a lot of people. I think there was a problem with air-conditioning, too, because it was very hot. I was hot, too. There was no place to sit, so we were standing and waiting for two hours. Some children were crying, and one old man fainted, so they had to call the ambulance. Then a flight assistant came and asked us if we could go to another airport. There are four airports in London, and she could put us on the afternoon flight from there. "Oh, no," I shouted again. My parents were angry, I was tired, but we agreed to go there. We got on the bus with loads of other people, and after a two-hour ride, we arrived at another London airport.

We finally got on our plane late in the evening. I was so tired that I slept the whole way, and woke up only in Vienna. Our trip from London to Vienna took ten hours.
