Deep Sea Monster

Last weekend I watched an adventure film "Deep Sea Monster". The film was directed by Pedro Fitzroy, and it was based on a book with the same title. The story is set in a small village on the coast of California, and it is about a strange sea creature which kills people.

One day a strange object from space falls into the sea. The fish and other sea animals breed quickly and become very big. One evening, Anika, a beach lifeguard's daughter, goes swimming in the sea and disappears. Soon more people disappear, and the local police and lifeguards organise a rescue team. They soon find a cave deep underwater with a strange big monster in it. It looks like a big shark with strange tentacles on its body. The police and lifeguards want to kill it but the tentacles are poisonous, and they cannot kill the monster. Anika's father wants to go alone inside the cave and fight with the monster.

I didn't like the film because there were many scary scenes with a lot of blood. I would not recommend it to small children, but some teenagers might like it. I think the music was awesome and the shots of fish and sharks were fantastic.
