Trapped in an Avalanche

Last winter Claire and her friend Miriam went skiing in Zell am See. In the morning the weather was sunny, and they enjoyed their skiing, but after lunch dark clouds came out and it started to snow heavily. Claire and Miriam wanted to go home but they lost their way downwards. Suddenly they saw an avalanche.

They got into panic. Luckily, Miriam noticed a small cave under a tree where they could hide and escape the avalanche. Both girls had their mobile phones and they tried to call for help but there was not signal. Suddenly the entrance to the cave was closed with snow. The girls were very scared. It was dark inside the cave and they noticed a lot of bats there. They were trapped in the cave. They worried that nobody would ever find them. Miriam and Claire spent the night in the cave.

The next morning a helicopter woke them up. They shouted loudly but the helicopter made a lot of noise and probably nobody could hear them. The girls were frustrated. After an hour or so, they heard a dog barking. The barking got louder and louder. Finally, some men removed the snow to the cave. The light came into the cave and the girls could go out. They were saved by a mountain rescue team.
