Hi Paulina,

Greetings from Australia.

I have always wanted to go to Rottnest Island to see quokkas, so when Dad said that we would fly “down under”, I was over the moon.

After a long flight to Australia, we arrived in Perth on the west coast and went to our hotel on the waterfront. The next day we took a ferry to the island with quokkas. There we hired bikes and went on a short trip on the island. But guess what? I didn’t see any quokkas there. I only bought a poster with this cute animal.

From Perth, we flew to Sydney. Mum took a tour of the opera house, and we went on a climb on the Harbour Bridge. It took us almost three hours to cross it because it was hot and my shoes were uncomfortable. But it was worth it. From the top of the bridge, we had a stunning view of the city.

On the next day in Sydney, we decided to go to Bondi Beach. It is only 7 km from the city centre. I was really lazy. I lay on the beach the whole day and got a nice tan. I am not a good swimmer and swimming in the ocean doesn’t grab me at all.

We are not going to fly to Uluru, a heritage centre and a holy place for Aborigines. It is in the middle of the outback and we have decided not to go there.

I hope to see you when I get back home. I want to show you all the amazing pictures I took there. I have great pics of the kangaroos!

Love,

Lena
