Report: What students like at school

Give reasons for the results and suggest how your school could improve in some of the categories.

INTRODUCTION

This report outlines what students like about their school and provides recommendations for improvements. The survey was conducted among 400 students at my school, who were given the following options: extra activities, project weeks, subjects, the school cafeteria, and classrooms.

ANALYSIS OF THE RESULTS

The results of the survey are not surprising. A vast majority of respondents chose extra activities. Almost the same number of students said that they liked project weeks the most. Nearly half of the respondents enjoyed the school subjects. Over one-third chose the school cafeteria, and less than a third liked the classrooms.

REASONS FOR STUDENTS' ANSWERS

It is easy to explain why most students preferred extra activities and project weeks. These are fun and not associated with school stress, grades, or homework. Such activities allow students to explore their hobbies and spend time with their classmates in a more relaxed environment. The school cafeteria was not very popular, probably because of its limited opening hours, while the classrooms were the least preferred choice.

RECOMMENDATIONS

In view of the above findings, two improvements are recommended: the cafeteria and the classrooms. First, the cafeteria should be open for as long as lessons are taking place. Second, our classrooms should be made friendlier, more colourful, and better equipped to meet the needs of the students.

CONCLUSION

Improving the classrooms and extending the cafeteria's opening hours would greatly improve students' experience at school. With these changes, the school can encourage greater motivation, engagement, and overall satisfaction among students, which may also lead to academic success.
